Destination	St. Petersburg to Beijing (June to September 2019)

Capital of Russia at the height of its Imperial era (1723-1918), St Petersburg is a dazzling mixture of baroque, rococo, classical and belle-epoque buildings created by Europe's leading architects of the day. Nevsky Prospekt is the city's main Parisian-style avenue, and radiating from it are grand boulevards and canal embankments lined with the former palaces of Russia's aristocracy. These days Nevsky is lined with world-name shops, alongside eateries priced from serf through to Grand-Duke... plus java-joints, internet cafes, museums, churches, theatres and more.

The largest museum collection in the world is spread throughout four buildings. The overwhelming richness of the museum is all the more enhanced by the incredible splendor of the buildings, inside and out: ornate and regal facades, huge frescoed halls; marble, wood and mosaic floors; and statuettes, figurines, and antique furniture all on such a grand scale that it fascinates the mind. The Hermitage houses a tremendous collection of Western European art, including such masters as Leonardo da Vinci and Raphael. Its collection of Spanish art may be compared only with that in Prado Museum in Madrid; the collection of French art is the largest outside France, displaying works by Degas, Renoir, Cezanne, Monet, Van Gogh, Goguen and Matisse. Peterhof is the most famous summer residence of Russian emperors. It is located 25 km west on the Gulf of Finland. Its history begins in 1704 when Peter I built a wooden house on the Gulf. In 1723 the enlarged palace became official summer residence, later it was expanded by Empress Elizabeth and called Grand Summer Palace. The architectural ensemble of Peterhof includes Upper and Lower Parks with more than 170 fountains and 4 cascades as well as several smaller palaces. These are Monplaisir palace with adjoining Catherine's Wing, Assembly Building with Imperial Bathrooms and Kitchen, the Hermitage Pavilion and Chateau de Marly, on the western edge of the park. The system of fountains was built in 1722. The intricate system of pipes stretches for nearly 22 km. The water flows downhill by force of gravity while the fountains operate according to the principle of communicating vessels. In both artistry and engineering the fountains of Peterhof are truly unique. Open 10:30 - 18:00. Grand Summer Palace is closed on Mondays and last Tuesday of the month.

St Petersburg to Moscow – Sapsan Train, Economy Seat*Departure: Thursday, Day 5 @ 9:00amArrival: Thursday, Day 5 @ 12:58am

Moscow took over the role of Russia's capital when the Mongols razed Kiev to the ground in the Middle Ages... its famous gold onion-domes have the image of Russia you'll barely find in St Petersburg. Much of Moscow still bears witness to those early days. The Kremlin is a huge 15th-century citadel built when marauding Mongolian troops were still a real menace. Its enormous fortified walls guard the ancient Kremlin Cathedrals within, once the centrepiece of the Russian Orthodox Church – and now once again restored to religious use. The colossal Treasure of the Russian Tsars is now on view within the Kremlin too, securely displayed in the former Armoury Chamber. Muscovites are addicted to pleasure, and the city overflows with stupendous restaurants, bars, clubs, & coffee-shops. Winter was always the holiday-time in Russia (too cold to work outdoors on building or farming) and with that came theatres – Russians love a show, and the Bolshoi Theatre is world famous (opera & ballet, on their "No 2" stage whilst the main theatre's being rebuilt). Come in winter to see Russians at play (theatres shut in summer here!), or in summer take a stroll in the Botanical Gardens? Muscovites love to party, and the wild nightclubs or chic bars open until very late, year-round.

Kremlin and Armoury Tour

Start: 10:00am

You will be met in the hotel reception by your guide. Enjoy a 3-hour guided walking excursion to the Moscow Kremlin and Armoury.

The Moscow Kremlin is a self-contained city with a multitude of palaces, armouries, and churches. Though its name instantly sparks images of formidable walls, glistening onion domes, and cloistered rulers of eras past, the word "Kremlin" simply means "fortified town". State regalia, invaluable icons, and treasures of Russian tsars are all stored in the Kremlin chambers and cathedrals. During the guided walking tour, you will have an opportunity to enjoy the historical monuments, such as the Great Kremlin Palace and the Arsenal building, see the trophy weapons of the war of 1812 and admire the cathedrals on the territory of the Kremlin. You will also enjoy the Tsar Bell that never rang and the Tsar Cannon that was never fired. You will also visit the Armoury Museum. Its collections represent wealth of Russian tsars accumulated throughout the centuries. It contains such exhibits as the chalice of Yuri Dolgorukiy, the helm and armour of Boris Godunov, collection of over fifty Faberge eggs, golden and silver works of applied art by Russian, European and Oriental masters, invaluable weapons and other works made of precious metals and stones.

Irkutsk Station to Listvyanka

On arrival at Irkutsk Railway Station a local representative will be waiting for you on the platform. Shared vehicle transfer to your accommodation in Listvyanka village on the shores of Lake Baikal.

Baikal is the world's largest stretch of fresh water, and the largest lake on the planet. Formed by plate tectonic movements of the earth's molten crust, it's a unique environment where species long extinct elsewhere have their strange existence. Baikal has the only freshwater seals in the world – nerpa nerpa – stranded here thousands of miles from the sea. Still odder is the strange golomka, which lives at such depths – Baikal is the world's deepest lake, over a mile to the bottom – that it explodes due to pressure-change if netted and dragged to the surface. Some of the animals, fish, algae and plants found in Lake Baikal are unique – and as you gaze over this vast expanse of water you sense it may contain much more than has so far been discovered. Lake Baikal was the biggest problem that faced the Trans-Siberian Railway builders – its huge size (40 miles across) lay directly in the path of the railroad. Their first solution was a steamer accommodating the entire train, and ferrying it safely to the other side – but winter temperatures forced them to lay tracks directly over the pack-ice when the Lake wasn't navigable. Having lost several locos through holes in the ice (there are a few warm springs down there..) the Circum-Baikal Line was built.

Listvyanka & Lake Baikal

By Car - 8 Hours

You will be met at your accommodation by an English-speaking guide. Enjoy a guided visit of the village including tour of Limnological (Lake Baikal) Museum.

Listvyanka is a small village about 1 hours drive from Irkutsk on the edge of Lake Baikal. The town is composed of wooden cabins, churches, hotels and market stalls. The Baikal Limnological Museum is ideal for those wishing to explore the wonders of Lake Baikal. All exhibits are dedicated to the origin and the history of the lake, its flora and fauna, geological structure, climate and tectonics of Pribaikalye. Stuffed birds and animals. Collection of minerals. Models of the lake bed showing its history, the peculiarities of its shoreline and bottom. Since 2004 a living exhibition started at the museum in 11 aquariums. St. Nikolay Church is both longstanding and gorgeous, making it a must-see for any visitor. When it's time to eat, visitors can try the local and deliciously prepared fish called omul.

Listvyanka to Irkutsk

via Wooden Architecture Museum & Decembrists Museum

Private car transfer to Irkutsk, via Wooden Architecture Museum. You will be met in the hotel reception, pick up time will be reconfirmed locally. Private car transfer from Listvyanka to Irkutsk with a visit to the Taltsy Wooden Museum en route. On arrival in Irkutsk visit the Decembrists Museum. Guide services & entrance fee included.

Open air Wooden Architecture Museum in Taltsy is located in a picturesque forest on the bank of the river Angara. This museum is an open-air museum that has a large collection of original wooden houses equipped with old-style furniture and domestic utensils, and "wooden tents" belonging to the various ethnic groups which inhabited this region. They were brought from several local villages. The museum conveys the lifestyle of 16th – 19th century Russia. Here you can learn about the various aspects of village life, see the interiors of a Russian fort and a 15th century watchtower, as well as glimpse at the lifestyle of the Buryat and Evenk people and see a Shaman yurt and other interesting objects.

The "Paris of Siberia", For most visitors, Irkutsk is principally the gateway to nearby Lake Baikal. However, its charming streets with old wooden houses suggest an era when the journey here was not cosy nights in the starched sheets of a sleeper-wagon – but over a month of frost-bitten misery, desperate conditions, and nights in flea-bitten roadside taverns... and Irkutsk the welcoming comfort of a substantial city after the hideous journey.

Departure: Monday, Day 16 @ 8:08am

Arrival: Tuesday, Day 17 @ 6:50am

Tuesday

Day 17

Ulaanbaatar is the world's most land-locked city. Ulaanbaatar – “Red Hero” – is a strangely attractive mixture of ancient temples and Buddhist lamaseries, alongside some ugly Soviet-era buildings built as “a gift” for the Mongolians by the USSR. On top of this are new cafes, bars, coffee-shops, internet-cafes and new-agey places. When you consider the city's remote location – just north of the baking Gobi Desert, and south of the freezing Steppes of Siberia, it's really remarkable that it's there at all! Don't miss visiting the Gandan Lamasery (“Gandantegchinlen” in full) – the largest and most important Buddhist monastery in the country. Like Tibet, the priest-kings of Mongolia were chosen by the Dalai-Lama in Lhasa – it would always be a Tibetan boy, sent to Mongolia at an early age. The Residence of the Bogdo-Khan (“Priest-King”) can also be visited, as can the Chojin Temple (although it's now a museum). Don't miss a chance to see the strange Central Department Store – where you can buy a home cinema system... or a ger.

The statue is symbolically pointed east towards his birthplace. It is on top of the Genghis Khan Statue Complex, a visitor centre, itself 10 metres tall, with 36 columns representing the 36 khans from Genghis to Ligdan Khan. It was designed by sculptor D. The 2nd floor houses an outstanding collection of costumes, hats and jewellery, representing most of Mongolia's ethnic groups. The 3rd floor is a must-see for fans of the Mongol horde.
